EDITORIAL.

THE time has come for another draft of us to be sent out with good tools into the world, and we go, like many another batch, with mingled feelings of regret and expectation—regret for the loss of that which we have enjoyed so wholeheartedly, so kinetically and with such intensity for the past year; and expectation for "the awfully big adventure" which is before us.

It has not been a phenomenal year from the point of view of University successes or radical changes in the School, but it has been a year which will well bear looking back upon. It has seen a spirit in the School which, in our experience, has never been beaten—a spirit of friendliness and real keenness that has permeated everything, be it work, or House Matches, or Corps Drill. We have been through a time when, as it were, the School has rested a moment from scintillation, to show that, with leaders of average intellect in the School, the system is still workable—that the corporate body, right through, is sound, and not dependent upon the existence of brilliant leaders who could conceivably carry through a faulty whole upon their own shoulders.

It is borne in upon us that the saying "men may come, and men may go, but I go on for ever" is very true of this School. We come, we go through our time, we leave, and, be our mark for good or for bad, the School goes on. That is the beauty of it—that we of this generation have gathered our harvest of experience, but that this is not the end. There are others to take our place, who in their turn will learn what they shall do and how they shall walk—yet the School as such remains fresh and undimmed by time. To many this leaving is a big pull—but time will not wait for us—we must go on, and then again go forward. To the coming generation—salutations.

L'homme n'a point de port, le temps n'a point de rive.
Il coule, et nous passons!

HOWSON COMMEMORATION.

The Old Boys’ gathering was held from Saturday, June 24th, to Monday, June 26th. Saturday started with the opening of the new 30 Yards Range, followed by a shooting match between the O.G.'s and the School. The Commemoration service was held in Chapel at 10 a.m., and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Canon Marcon. The annual cricket match was started at 11 a.m., and this and the shooting match are fully reported elsewhere in this number.

A meeting of the Old Greshamian Club was held in the evening, when F. G. Womersley and E. H. Johnson were re-elected Secretary and Treasurer. The Committee for the coming year was elected as follows:—Mr. H. W. Partridge, Mr. B. F. Armitage, Capt. F. R. B. Skrimshire, Mr. P. W. Rolleston, Mr. E. A. Berthoud, Mr. E. A. Robertson (Master of the Committee). The Committee hopes to arrange for a dinner in London during the Christmas holidays, and during the same period E. A. Berthoud is intending to try and arrange for some Hockey matches for past and present members of the School.

"THE TAMING OF THE SHREW."

Another delightful setting in the theatre, a cast of exceptionally high standard, a splendid Petruchio—what more indeed can we ask for in the annual School Play?

From the title and from experience of professional productions one is led to expect this comedy to depend chiefly on Katharina. In the School production, however, the situation was completely reversed for Petruchio was the centre, the crux, and the life of the whole performance.

Auden struggled nobly against overwhelming odds to give Katharina her rightful dominant position in the play, but was completely swamped by Petruchio’s all-pervading personality from the moment he appeared. To do justice to the character of Katharina is an extremely trying task for any mere male, and Auden was “far from assisted” by a poor wig and clothes that can only be described as shocking. Under so many adverse circumstances, however, it reflected the greatest credit on him that he contrived to infuse considerable dignity into his passionate outbursts, and moreover by his spirited performance showed that determination can overcome almost insurmountable difficulties.

Bianca was treated very much more kindly both by the wardrobe mistress and the perruquier, and made of that lady at least in appearance a very attractive character. Denny in the small part of the widow was perhaps the most becomingly dressed of all the ladies.
So often in amateur productions the minor characters are inadequately performed. But this year's play was remarkable, apart from Shaw's Petruchio, for the large number of excellent character sketches among the male parts. This was undoubtedly due to the number of experienced players who filled the smaller parts. For example, Austin and Browne by their skill saved the two rather unsatisfactory parts of Gremio and Hortensio from insignificance. Then the admirable trio of elderly gentlemen, Baptista, Vincentio and Pedant, were most realistically played by Field, Lavender, and FitzGerald respectively. This trio and Hortensio and Gremio were especially praiseworthy for the artistic manner in which they acted, always within the limits of their parts, and did not attempt to thrust their individual performances out of the picture as a whole. On the other hand, it was distressing to see Medley as Biondello, a player of undoubted talent, giving the only indifferent performance in a cast of such very high standard.

Grumio, a delicious character, was delightfully played by Bather. He is a born comedian, and moreover resisted the temptation of such to overact.

Lucentio and Tranio were frankly dull. The standard Shakespearean lover is admittedly a trying part for the prosaic English youth to play, but these two struck one as being unnecessarily lifeless and blasé.

Oldham and Pollard as the Tailor and Curtis added to the strong company of comedians.

Lastly, of Shaw's Petruchio one can only say that almost from the moment he appeared he ceased to give an excellent representation of Petruchio, and became the man himself. And in spite of all the admirable support which he received, it still remains that he carried the whole play on his shoulders, and yet always with a charming easy swing.

As always, Mr. Geoffrey Shaw's incidental music was delightful. It was unfortunate that the wind in the trees prevented one from appreciating the efforts of the choir and orchestra to the extent which they deserved. But it is certain that no School production would be complete without the invaluable services of Mr. Greatorex and his assistants.

It only remains heartily to congratulate the School and the producer, Mr. Robertson, on the addition of another splendid success to the already long line of former productions.

PLAY WEEK-END.

It was a great pleasure to see so many parents down for the Play on July 1st. A new record has been created in the School, for no less than a hundred and fifty relations and friends were in Chapel on the Sunday. The Headmaster preached at the evening service, and we publish his sermon at the request of a parent:—

"We are labourers together with God."—
1 Corinthians III., 9.

The recent inspection of the School has naturally turned one’s thoughts back to the past, to the work that has been accomplished. As we survey the past history of the School we have great cause for thankfulness. One or two of us, who have known it since its new birth, who remember it as it was twenty-two years ago, may feel this, perhaps, in a way that others cannot, though I imagine everyone of us must share, in some degree or other, this feeling of deep gratitude to Almighty God for the way in which He has led us.

That day in September, 1900, when the School entered upon its new lease of life, is but as yesterday and yet, the interval has sufficed to weave a web of surpassing interest to hundreds who have lived and grown up here, and to countless others yet to come. These years have seen the rooting of a new and strong and vigorous life, with a distinct character of its own, a life which we believe to be instinct with something of high purpose and destined to rise to heights not yet attained.

A society such as this affords a striking instance of the rapid growth of many and lasting associations. We have only to let our thoughts travel round the place for a moment—this Chapel, with its voices and aspirations, the School buildings, the Houses, the Theatre, the Playing Fields. Go back only twenty-two years and there was nothing of all these in existence. And to-day, think of the life-long memories associated with them, the joys and sorrows, the friendships never to be forgotten, the purposes born among them which will work moulding, modifying its life. Are we living—each with the thought ever in our minds that a School of any real and enduring worth must be a centre, a focus, of the very best life of its time; that there ought to be a clear and active purpose in its leaders, nay, in every single one of its members, for everyone can contribute something, to raise the general level of life in some respect or other, to rectify standards where they may be defective, to set their faces against notions and practices which are not perfectly sound and true and honourable?

It is well for us to consider, in all seriousness, what the members of any great School ought to be doing, as they live in it, fixing, moulding, modifying its life. Are we living with the thought ever in our minds that a School of any real and enduring worth must be a centre, a focus, of the very best life of its time; that there ought to be a clear and active purpose in its leaders, nay, in every single one of its members, for everyone can contribute something, to raise the general level of life in some respect or other, to rectify standards where they may be defective, to set their faces against notions and practices which are not perfectly sound and true and honourable?

It is good for us, on a day like this, to think out what it really means to belong to a society of this kind, to consider what it demands of us. On such a day we feel these things more keenly than at other times. On ordinary days we are very apt to forget them, as we travel the familiar round of common duties. To the older portion of us, at any rate, both men and boys, the call comes with sufficient clearness. What answer shall we return to the questioning voice? "I have committed unto you," it seems to say, "a great and sacred charge, all the possibilities of this young and undeveloped life. What account are you prepared to render of it?" How many of us can say that, day by day, we set our faces to all this with any definite or serious aim, that our personal life is marked by anything which can rightly be called religious purpose, that we are constantly doing something to raise the moral life, to quicken the spiritual life, to stimulate the intellectual life; that we are making it our purpose to set an example of simplicity in taste and habits; that we are spreading the spirit of generous and self-denying manliness, of entire faithfulness and devotion to duty?

Our great historic Schools appeal to their age and their old traditions, their antecedent life and its memories, the names of men distinguished in Church and State, and these are powerful voices. But, in spite of our ancient foundation, these are not for us. But, young as we are in some respects, we are not without our memories of the past. We, too, have our traditions, though they may not, as yet, be old. We think of him, our great Founder, who built this School up from very small beginnings and, by his wonderful personality, breathed into it a love for the things that are true and honourable, pure and strong. We remember, too, some of the early members of the School, boys well known to many of us, who helped to lay the foundations of trust and honour, of purity and industry, of service and self-sacrifice, boys whose names are recorded for all time in this Chapel. It would be difficult to exaggerate the way in which they enhanced the reputation of their School, by the nobility of their bearing is life no less than in death. There is certainly no little in the past to inspire us to noble effort.

But our thoughts to-day turn rather to the future which is still unravelled. If this School is to continue to be a great School, in the highest sense of the term, it must keep and develop the secret of how to train up and send forth not a few chosen ones here and there, but the mass of its sons, the rank and file of its members, characterised, not by some special gift, not by some literary accomplishment or some varnish of culture, but by a combination of gifts and strength and moral purpose, which shall fit them to be prominent workers in the next stage of our country's progress—men of cultivated and disciplined intellect, enlightened and strong of purpose, sworn to the chivalry of personal purity; men of simple and pure tastes; the declared enemies of luxury and self-indulgence; men of aspiration and ideals, in whom public spirit and social purpose shall be practical and guiding motives, who shall feel the call to alter those conditions of life, which are working destructively in this country—above all, men whose lives are guided by a serious and humble and reverent spirit, who may fairly be described as true Christians—strong, faithful and not afraid.

This is no mean ideal for any School to aim at. To achieve it is to do God's work. In making this our aim and working for it with all our might, we are indeed labourers together with Him.

A great Headmaster, who passed away the other day, in the course of his last address, said:—"The object of a modern school is to enlist boys into the service of mankind." That is a fine and true saying. A School is not an end in itself; it is a training ground for life—for a life of service. You have a fine field for this here. Are you making the most of it? Are you doing your fair share in this grand work? Are you trying to raise the level of life in some respect or other, to rectify standards where they are defective? Are you helping to raise the moral life, to quicken the spiritual life, to stimulate the intellectual life? Are you setting an example of simplicity in tastes and habits? Are you unselfish and generous, quick to offer help, eager to be of service? Are you self-controlled, the unquestioned master of yourself, guarding jealously the fortress of your purity against any and every foe? Are you giving your best powers to your work, making full use of the wonderful opportunities given to you here? Are you public-spirited, ready to subordinate your own inclinations to the good of your House or School? Are you definitely interesting yourself in the social and political questions of the day, so that later on you may play your part as a useful and intelligent citizen? Is your religion a real thing in your life, and your worship here something more than a form? Are you helping to raise the standard of reverence and devotion in this Chapel, or are you lowering it by posture or by look? Is there an underlying earnestness of purpose in your life or are you just drifting along through your time here like a ship without a rudder? Are you living and acting here in such a way that your School has reason to be proud of you?

These are searching questions. One is glad that so many of you can answer them in the affirmative. One rejoices to know that you value at its true worth the goodly heritage which has been bequeathed to you and are determined to hand it on intact and enriched. Many of you have indeed a right to be proud of your School, for by your conduct, your faithfulness, your devotion, you are daily adding something to its strength. Be assured that it is a fine thing to give of your very best—body, mind and spirit—to such a cause. The man or boy who lives here, day by day, with the definite purpose before him of making this School a better place—as fine a place as it can possibly be—is in very deed and truth a fellow-worker with God. May He strengthen every one of us for this high service!

RECITAL.

On Wednesday, July 12th, a concert party gave a recital in aid of St. Dunstan's Hostel and the National Institute for the Blind. Of the six performers, five were blind, and of these the bass, the tenor, and the pianist had lost their sight during the war. Their programme was extremely catholic in nature and there was ample opportunity for everyone's tastes to be satisfied; we mention as examples Schubert’s setting to “Who is Sylvia”—one of the most beautiful of song settings—Sullivan’s “A Regular Royal Queen” from the “Gondoliers,” and the really amusing duet, “Two Jolly Fellows.” Each item was carefully placed on the programme, so that the necessary balance was attained and quartets mingled with solos in a manner that obviated any monotony that might have arisen. Mr. Wyeth’s pianoforte solos were extraordinary well done, and he accomplished what must have seemed an impossibility, namely, the faultless rendering of quick passages. Altogether it was a pleasant evening, and the many encores sustained it till a late hour. Moreover when the end actually came it was with a glad heart that we contributed to the collection, for we ourselves were influenced by the optimism which was an outstanding characteristic of “The Blind Musicians.”

CRICKET SEASON, 1923.

The cricket season that has just past has been one of the most successful of recent years. To many of us, it has been a great pleasure to see the School holding its own against such formidable opponents as West Norfolk, Norwich Wanderers, and Norfolk Club and Ground. To defeat a strong team of experienced cricketers, such as Norfolk Club and Ground, was a triumph of which the School may be justly proud. It was disappointing that the XI. did not shine in the matches at Overstrand and Gunton, but apart from these the team has always given a good account of itself. Of the batsmen, Garland and Squarey, who have, now had their colours for three years, have played remarkably good cricket, while Kidd has improved considerably.

Squarey, Kidd and Riggall have bowled consistently well and thoroughly deserve the success that they have achieved. Behind the wickets, Garland has been as good as ever. The junior members of the team, owing probably to lack of experience and excessive anxiety, have not done themselves justice, but many of them are young and should improve a good deal next year. A great feature of the season has been the excellence of the fielding—visiting teams have all been struck by it—and Garland is to be congratulated on the high standard attained. We were fortunate in having him to captain the XI. for a second year, and a great measure of the success is due to his enthusiasm and to the able way in which he has led the side. We wish him all success at Cambridge.

HOUSE MATCHES.

1st ROUND.

KENWYN AND DAY-BOYS v. HOWSONS.

Howsons batted first, and gave a disappointing exhibition. Riggall bowled well, but he would be still more successful if he did not vary the length of his run so much, and made more use of his fast off break.

Kenwyn started badly, three wickets falling for five runs, but later Oakeley made several good drives. Riggall gave a sound exhibition, being particularly strong on the on side, and Evans played attractive cricket.

Howsons fared even worse in their second innings despite some loose bowling by Riggall. Evans bowled four overs, all of which were maidens, and took two wickets for no runs.

Kenwyn won by an innings and 3 runs.

Howsons: 104 and 84.

Kenwyn: 191 (Riggall 75, Oakeley 49).

Bowling.

Howsons: Riggall 6 for 33.

FARFIELD v. WOODLANDS.

Garland and Goddard opened the Farfield innings, and their partnership gave promise of a large score, but this was not fulfilled. During T. O. Garland's stay at the wickets runs came freely, but after his dismissal the innings speedily ended.

Woodlands, aided by dropped catches, established a lead with five wickets down, and the final total reached 253. Toosey and Nicholson batted well for the first wicket, but Squarey made the bulk of the runs.

Farfield's second innings was disappointing, except perhaps for the patient innings of E. Garland and the splendid fielding of Woodlands.

Woodlands won by an innings and 15 runs.

Farfield: 135 and 88 (Garland 60).

Woodlands: 240 (Squarey 95, Nicholson 40).

Bowling.

Farfield: Kidd 7 for 57, Squarey 3 for 12.

WOODLANDS v. FARFIELD.

Woodlands won by 3 wickets.

Farfield: 105 and 100.

Woodlands: 139 and 72 for 7 wkts.

HOWSONS v. KENWYN AND DAY-BOYS.

Howsons won by 4 wickets.

Kenwyn: 93 and 105.

Howsons: 122 and 84 for 6 wickets.

2nd ROUND.

1st XI.

WOODLANDS v. KENWYN AND DAY-BOYS.

This match was interesting from start to finish, although one was conscious throughout that Woodlands had the game well in hand.

The Woodlands' innings was marked by good fielding, and splendid catches dismissed Kidd and Dollar when both were set and scoring rapidly. Kenwyn's first innings promised well, and Riggall and Evans put on 27 runs before the former was out. Evans then scored, and the next six wickets fell for no runs. Kenwyn followed-on, and the match was finished in a sea-fret. This made fielding difficult and aided by many "lives" Riggall carried his bat, after making the bulk of the runs. Kenwyn were without Oakeley. Squarey’s bowling was exceptional, and his steady length was a constant source of trouble to the batsmen.

Woodlands won by an innings and 31 runs.
Kenwyn and Day-Boys: 33 and 92 (Riggall 67 not out).
Woodlands: 156 (Dollar 46).

Bowling.
Woodlands: Shaw 3 for 9.

HOWSONS v. FARFIELD.
The wicket on the first day was very slow after remarkably heavy rains, and though it dried somewhat during the brilliant sunshine of the afternoon it never became really difficult. Generally speaking, the batting showed a lack of enterprise. Owing chiefly to superior work in the field, Farfield established a useful lead on the first innings.

On the second day Garland showed a brilliant example of vigorous batting on a wicket which was dead slow. His exhilarating innings lasted about three-quarters of an hour. He took full advantage of the short boundaries, his leg-hitting being particularly fine. FitzGerald’s sound defence prevented the second innings from being finished, so that Farfield had to be content with a win on the first innings.

Farfield won on the 1st innings by 43 runs.
Farfield: 107 and 166 for 5 wkts. (Garland 110).
Howsons: 64 and 75 for 6 wkts.

Bowling.
Farfield: FitzGerald, 5 for 11.
Howsons: Garland, 5 for 29.

2nd XI.

WOODLANDS v. HOWSONS.
Woodlands won by 117 runs.
Howsons: 51 and 34.
Woodlands: 64 and 138.

FARFIELD v. KENWYN AND DAY-BOYS
Farfield won by 27 runs.
Farfield: 100 and 75.
Kenwyn and Day-Boys: 38 and 110.

THE OLD SCHOOL HOUSE.
The Old School House have had a successful season, having won all the inter-School matches. A score of 47 (Holtom 20) against Glebe House did not look very hopeful, but Vines 5 for 10 and Joy 4 for 11 accounted for the whole team in less than 10 overs, the total being 26, which as there is rarely time to complete 2nd innings settled the match.

The return at Hunstanton was exciting. Glebe House began coming out very fast and had six down for 27, but the later comers played up finely and brought the score to 66, more than one liked the look of. With five wickets down for 47, it was quite doubtful whether we should get the required 20, but Holtom (not out 12) helped to take the score to 82. Vines and Seyd each had 16, and Beck 11. Vines again bowled well, getting 4 for 16, while Gaymer at the other end took 2 for 1. The fielding on both sides in both matches was very good.

The matches against Taverham Hall were more decisive victories. In the first match, away, our opponents could make little of Vines, who took 8 wickets for 18, and were all dismissed for 43. Our score was 131 for 7 wickets, in which Joy 64 not out dwarfed everything. Vines and Beck each contributed 15.

In the return match at Holt, Taverham Hall led off with 50, Vines 5 for 27, Gaymer 3 for 4. Our reply was 107, Holtom 34, Joy 31 not out, Seyd 13, but as 6 wickets were down for 32, the prospect at one time looked none too rosy. Holtom and Joy put on 53 for the 7th wicket, thus redeeming a very feeble start.

We ventured to tackle our old friends, Suffield Park, with a 2nd XI., but two big boys who did all the bowling were too much for us. The two together made 101 out of 124 to our 58, of which White made 27 and Squires 14. The return match has not yet taken place owing to rain.

A very satisfactory feature of the 1st XI. has been the liveliness in the field. Kerslake, the Captain, has set a good example at point, and is very well supported by Seyd and Stowell. The former generally succeeds in running somebody out from cover.
A CINERARY URN.

An interesting discovery has been made by J. H. Burrows. While he was in an old gravel pit beside the Edgefield Hill, his attention was attracted by a small hole which looked a likely place for a martin’s nest. Putting his hand in he felt something hard and came away with some pieces of baked clay with primitive marks on them. A day or two later Mr. Wilkinson organised a small digging party. All that was left was cleared and a photograph taken in situ. Some pieces were shown subsequently to the expert in the British Museum who at once pronounced it to be a cinerary urn of the Bronze Age. To put it plainly it has been there some 2500 years. There is a fair number of these in the British Museum from various parts of the world, but there did not seem to be one from Norfolk. Unfortunately even if it can be pieced together there is less than half of it remaining. In the opinion of the British Museum expert the finder is much to be congratulated.

OPENING OF THE NEW RANGE.

On Friday, June 23rd, a board of officers, detailed by Divisional Orders, sat on the newly-erected range and found all correct. Special permission was granted to hold an opening ceremony on the following day, but ordinary firing will not commence until the papers have passed through the usual official channels.

On Saturday, June 24th, the School and Old Boys assembled at the Range at 9 a.m., and the ceremony opened with a speech by the Headmaster, in which he commented upon the excellent quality of the structure and the laying out of the grounds, pointed out some of the special advantages of the range and showed that it was in a sense part of our War Memorial. He congratulated Mr. Davies and his assistants on their work and Sergt-Major Wright on the laying-out of the grounds. He referred to the fine reputa-

THE GENERAL INSPECTION.

The General Inspection, for which the Eastern Command detailed Col. Macnamara, G.S.O.I. of the 4th Division, took place on Saturday, July 8th. After the inspection and march past, the inspecting officer selected individuals for particular tasks and, by allotting different work to each platoon, covered a very large range. Although in most cases units were not given the particular task at which they usually shine most, all acquitted themselves well, and an excellent Official Report has been the result. The N.C.O.'s particularly distinguished themselves, and the band and signallers received special mention for their work.

THE TERM'S WORK.

Although developing earlier, the signallers really came into being as a definite unit during this term and they are now a well-equipped and useful section. An experiment of considering the band plus the signallers as a fourth platoon, when required for Company work, has proved satisfactory. By accepting this organisation from the beginning of the year, it is hoped that, with an allowance of points based on parades, they may in future take part in the "Straight" Shield Competition. The band has made rapid progress, and shows promise for this year's camp.

The work of all units has been steadily progressive and increasing care has been shown in turn-out.

Physical Training has improved rapidly this term, and reached a high standard. A squad working on Camp competition lines has been doing good work, and Sergt.-Instructor Newall from the Norwich Depot, who has been over half-a-dozen times, has been of great assistance.

APPOINTMENTS.

Lt. A. B. Douglas (Commission T.F., General Lieut.).
Lt. A. M. Gamble (Commission T.F., General Lieut.).

STRAIGHT SHIELD.

The competition was held on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, July 21st and 22nd. Major Bruce and Captain Oates, both from the Norwich Depot, judged the competition on the respective days. The Shield was won by No. 3 platoon, commanded by Sergt. T. O. Garland.

THE CHAPEL.

Sunday, July 2nd, was a red letter day in the history of the Chapel, for the collection in the evening, which amounted to £55 17s. 6d., extinguished the debt of £50 still remaining on the combined Chapel and War Memorial Funds. Since the Chapel and the War Memorial, as originally planned, are now paid for, it has been decided to close the Chapel Building Fund and the War Memorial Fund. The Chapel Building Fund was opened in February, 1907, and, in the fifteen years that have since elapsed, a sum of £12,793 3s. 11d. has been subscribed. This includes £1,065 6s. 3d. contributed by Old Boys during the War to the Old Boys' Seating Fund, and £416 17s. 6d. from the Chapel Lighting Fund. The War Memorial Fund has been closed at the figure of £3,031 16s. 1d. Thus the two funds together have realised no less than £15,825, no mean achievement on the part of the School and its friends.

But though the Chapel Building Fund is being closed, it does not mean that the Chapel is completed or that money will not be required in the future for it. A Chapel Fund will always be open and it will no doubt receive contributions from time to time. The most pressing need at present is the furnishing of the Chancel. This is under consideration, in fact the hangings for the North and South walls have already been promised as a memorial gift, and the matter is being gone into at the moment.

The altar has recently been completed by the addition of the figures of St. Augustine and St. George to the reredos. We should like to express, once again, our thanks to the kind donors, who have.
throughout these years, taken such a lively and practical interest in the Chapel.

SCHOOL LIBRARY.

For the following numerous gifts the Library is grateful to the givers:—A Treasury of Irish Poetry (Rolleston and Stopford Brooke), from Mrs. Rolleston; Canon Barnett (Mrs. Barnett), from Mrs. Harold Spender; The Great White South (Ponting), from Lady Scott; In Northern Mists (Nansen), from A. Hutchinson, Esq.; Tidal Lands (Casey and Oliver), from R. Holland Martin, Esq.; The Sense of Smell in Birds (J. H. Gurney), from the Author; The Hunting Wasps (Fabre), from F. C. Hinde, Esq.; Bacteria in relation to Country Life (Lipmann), from F. Oldham, Esq.; Ocean Research and the Great Fisheries (Howell), from an Anonymous Donor; The Romance of Building (Allen S. Walker), from the Author; The Glamour of Prospecting (Cornell), from an Old Boy; Mr. Punch's History of Modern England, from C. L. Graves, Esq.; Four Works by Max Beerbohm, from I. Hepburn, O.G.; The Art of Drawing in Lead Pencil (Salway), from J. G. Birkett, O.G.; The False Assumptions of Democracy (Ludovici), from O. J. Battine; The Aran Islands (Synge), from "Howsons" House Library; Guide Books of Places in France connected with the War, from The Miche-I'n Tyre Company; The Engineer (a Periodical), sent weekly by the Publisher. The vacancy on the committee this term for the representation of Howsons has been filled by S. J. Bull.

NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

In spite of the fact that this year has seen the secession from the Society of one of its most flourishing sections, the period has none the less been one of considerable activity. Several papers have been read to the whole Society in the course of the year.

On October 30th Dr. F. A. Bather, M.A., F.R.S., lectured on "A Piece of Limestone." He gave an account of the general formation of limestone, and described varieties from different parts of the country, illustrating his paper by lantern slides.

On March 5th Dr. W. S. Colman lectured to the Society on "Four Volcanic Eruptions." He began by describing the causes of volcanic eruptions, and then went on to describe four of the most terrible that the world has ever seen, namely, that of Vesuvius (17 A.D.), Monte Nuovo (1538), Mont Pelee (1902) and Krakatoa (1883). Of the first three he read descriptions by eye-witnesses, and he showed many realistic lantern slides from pictures and photographs.

On March 26th the Headmaster lectured on "The Dolomites." As it had been his good fortune to visit them on several occasions, he spoke with great enthusiasm and was able to give the Society some idea of their beauty by a series of very fine lantern slides.

On June 23rd R. F. Barbour read a paper on "Stereoscopic vision and its effect upon the human brain." He explained that stereoscopic vision was confined to the higher animals, and described how it had aided man in securing his supremacy over the brute world. This paper too was illustrated by lantern slides.
It was a matter of regret to the Society when the Architectural Section seceded, but the gap formed was partially filled in February, when the newly-formed Anthropological Society was incorporated as a section of the N.H.S.

On June 3rd, by the very kind invitation of Mr. Wortley, three sections of the Society spent a day at Sutton Broad. Situated in the very heart of the Broads, the spot abounded in animal and plant life. The Zoological Section was engrossed with the wealth of marsh birds; and the bitterns, of which there are quite a number on the Broad, were of especial interest. The Entomological Section spent most of its time in hunting swallow-tail butterflies, which were quite common, and the Botanical Section searched for and found many rare and interesting plants. Mr. Wortley gave tea to his guests just before they departed, and for this and the kindness of his invitation—a kindness which is immensely appreciated by all concerned—the Society expresses to him its grateful thanks.

ENGLISH LITERATURE SOCIETY.

"Read not to contradict nor confute, nor to believe and take for granted nor to find talk and discourse, but to weigh and consider." Bacon.

These have been the aims of the Society and if sometimes the required results have not been obtained, it does not matter, so long as the ideals have been there.

To get the best out of literature, it is not necessary to condemn the bad, but rather to seek the good: to appreciate rather than depreciate. At the same time, however, it is absolutely necessary to recognise faults when they occur and not pass them over on the grounds that they were written by a great man.

The Society has not claimed to teach literature to its members, but to increase their appreciation of it, by putting before them works of the best writers and to broaden this appreciation by trying to vary the programme as much as possible.

To study the acute problem of how to get comfortable, as well as to appreciate poetry and prose, however well they may be read, is a task that is well-nigh impossible. Thanks however to the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Hodgson, the Society has had no such cause for complaining, and we would like to take this opportunity of thanking them most heartily for allowing the Society to meet at the "Crossways" and for entertaining it there. Also for the interest they themselves have taken in the work of the Society.

As usual, the work of the Society has covered a wide field, and in addition to readings, J.D. Hayward read a most interesting paper on "Modern Poetry." A specially interesting meeting was held in April, when Mr. Greatorex read extracts from some of the works of Dickens illustrating several of his characters.

Of the four plays read, the most interesting was undoubtedly "The Pretenders" by Henrik Ibsen, another being Clement Dane's much-disputed "Will Shakespeare," which was received favourably by the Society.

So, at the end of the year, one can look back on very pleasant meetings, with much accomplished.

SOCIOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

During the past year the Sociological Society has slightly deviated from its original function. Intended as a rather exclusive body, which was to hold informal discussions on social and political subjects recently, whilst retaining the original number of members as a nucleus, it has invited men of standing in the outside world to give addresses, and on more than one occasion has thrown open its doors to the School as a whole.

We cannot feel that this is anything but an advantage, for thus the scope of the Society has been widened and the darkness of ignorance, not only of some twenty members but of the School as a whole, been made light by the excellent programme with which the Hon. Secretary has regaled us. This does not mean that members should be discouraged from reading papers, far otherwise, but it is always a delight to listen to well-known men who actually have a wider experience and a greater fund of practical knowledge. There is one other suggestion that might be made, namely that some sort of private discussion should be provided for the members of the Society differing from the usual answering of questions which follows a paper.

Before going into details of the various activities of the Society, our thanks are due to the retiring President, whose work has been specially arduous owing to the fact that he lives over six miles from the School in a county where trains run to serve neither man nor beast. It is largely due to his suggestion that the Society has broadened its outlook and he is responsible for the admirable institution of expeditions to neighbouring industries.

VISIT TO WATTS' NAVAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

JUNE 13th, 1922.

"Keep Smiling" is the motto of the Watts' Naval Training School, and despite the pouring rain we found ourselves living up to it from the moment of our arrival; for the first sight which met our astonished eyes as we entered the grounds over a frail wooden bridge was a large lifeboat swinging between two trees on the summit of a hill. The School Buildings, which are situated there, were built originally for the sons of Norfolk farmers, but the school suffered such ill-success that pessimists prophesied a similar fate for the new Gresham's School.

The principal feature of the interior of the building is the lofty hall, which is surrounded by tier upon tier of galleries leading into dormitories, which are all named after famous admirals. The whole school is treated as a ship, the time being announced by bells, the night divided into watches and the floors referred to as decks. Astern the rooms used for instructing the cadets in signalling, knot-tying, steering and wireless, give some idea of the scope of the curriculum on the nautical side of the school work. Amidships there is a changing-room, which is capable of precipitating hot or cold water, if required, to damp the exuberant spirits of the youthful cadets. In the same neighbourhood there is the bakery, which contains an oven the size of our vestry.

Forward there is a steam kitchen, leading to the new dining-hall, one end of which was being scrubbed by the boys in preparation for the opening ceremony, which was to take place two days later. On the raised platform at the other end, some of the younger boys were rehearsing the hornpipe, which they intended to perform. They did this with great vivacity, rolling from side to side in true nautical fashion to the accompaniment of an elderly naval man's fiddle. We were informed that they were not as good as usual owing to the fact that they were dancing in shoes for the first time. In the next room, four platoons were doing arms drill in brisk naval fashion. In different parts of the ship there were watches, who were on duty for three-hour shifts, thus giving testimony to the all-round training that a boy receives there. Their work is at once practical and theoretical, for a boy is taught not only how to do arithmetic, but also how to signal and scrub floors. In addition to such things, swimming is taught as a definite subject in their open-air swimming bath, which, though small, is capable of holding 290 boys at voluntary bathing.

The boys are those who at Dr. Barnardo's Homes have shown an inclination for a seafaring life. They soon become imbued with the excellent naval discipline of the school, and thus at the age of sixteen are qualified to start their lives aboard ship. But all this is done in such a way that they are able to live up to their motto, "Keep Smiling."

We all enjoyed our visit immensely and we should like to thank Mr. Eccles for enabling us to see the school about which we have heard so much. Our thanks are chiefly due to our genial hosts, who gave us such a splendid welcome.

"TEN YEARS HARD LABOUR ON THE FLOOR OF THE HOUSE."

Energetic, spontaneous, jovial, abrupt, Sir William Bull kept the Sociological Society in a state of hilarity for an hour and a half. But in spite of the light and genial atmosphere of the meeting there was throughout his address an undercurrent of valuable information, imparted as it was in the true spirit of Punch's expressive phrase "Legislation without tears."

He told us of his career as he had mapped it out, comparing this with what it actually had been; he described the intricate art of electioneering and the initiation of a new member; he gave a description of life in the House of Commons and mentioned the astounding web of Convention of which the wary member can make use in forwarding or defeating a motion; and all this he seasoned with an endless supply of wit and humour, illustrated with an amazing store of anecdotes. Much as we enjoyed the evening we cannot say that it added to our impression of the dignity of the "Mother of Parliaments." But we were greatly relieved to hear that the real work of the House of Commons is done, in its committees.

"PERSONALITY AND CAREER."

To those who came to listen to Mr. Reith on June 24th perhaps there was no problem so real and so acute as the question of what they were "going to be." He said much that was helpful, much that was encouraging on this subject, but perhaps his most valuable work was to impress upon us the vital importance of a decision. "Man know thyself" was his advice; find out early for what one is fit, find out an aim that is worth while and make for it at once, and with all speed.

"Hitch your wagon to a star, and be cheered with the thought that all chances favour the attainment of a goal after which a man has striven."

The need of self-confidence, of tact, of treating a subordinate with consideration, all this and much more he emphasised; but he spoke, too, of the need for something more lasting than one's own strength, more certain than a "trust in Princes," a permanent power which the agnostic must always lack.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.

The announcement, in our last issue but one, of the transformation of the Architectural and Archaeological Section of the N.H.S. into a society whose attention was to be directed over the whole field of art seems to have raised some apprehension lest Architecture and Archaeology might suffer in consequence. However, the study of other arts seems not to have starved, but to have enriched, the appreciation of architectural beauty; while there has been an unprecedented enthusiasm among members of the Society for Archaeology, stimulated by a number of discussions and lectures. In the winter term there was a discussion on "Ancient Earthworks" and a most admirable lecture by Dr. Auden on "Pre-Norman Sculpture in Great Britain"; and only a few days ago we had a very interesting and instructive first-hand exposition of some recent finds of Late Celtic Burial Pottery at Swarling (Kent) by G. H. Locket, who himself took part in the dig; together with a general survey of the pottery of that type now extant.

There have been several lectures on Architectural subjects, namely, "The Seven Churches of Glendalough," "The Proposed Howson Memorial Library," "Winchester," and "Life in an English Monastery." The expeditions, too, have been almost entirely to places of Architectural interest. The first of these was to Sheringham, Cromer, and Beeston Priory, and the second to Edgefield, Mannington Hall and several other churches and halls.

The most important expedition was by char-a-banc to Norwich, and took place... on July 15th. Upon arrival at that city the party divided into two, one going to see the interesting Strangers' Hall, the other to the magnificent Norman keep, and the adjacent museum and art gallery. They reunited in time to hear, in the Cathedral, the solemn chords of a voluntary on the organ and to admire the lofty massiveness of the stately Norman nave, before they were conducted round the building in a most interesting manner, through the kind foresight of the Dean. Then, after tea, various other buildings, such as St. Peter Mancroft, with its beautiful roof and East window, were also visited before the time came to return home.

As the new Society was only formed late in the spring term there was little time for it to branch out into the new fields which lay before it. But still the address of the President, Mr. C. H. Tyler, on "Greek Sculpture," and the lecture, well illustrated at the piano, on "Beethoven," by C. J. Hales, laid firm foundations for future developments along the same lines. Mention must also be made here of the excellent lantern lecture to the School by Mr. C. F. Cooke on British Painting, which without doubt has greatly stimulated the artistic appreciation of many members of the School. The Society will always welcome the inclusion of such lectures as this among those provided by the Entertainment Committee.

As it is one of the objects of the Society to help to co-ordinate in the School the study of the many branches of art, it hopes to provide, during the coming winter season, a series of lectures dealing with various aspects of one general epoch in the history of artistic development. The era chosen has been the Renaissance. It is not intended to exclude lectures on other subjects from the calendar, but the Committee wishes to encourage strongly those which deal with the one they here put forward. They hope, also, that these lectures may prove to be the nucleus round which may be grouped expositions of corresponding subjects in other parts of the School, so that the task which the Society has set itself may prove to be of some real value.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of "The Gresham."

Dear Sir,—I was present in Chapel on Commemoration Day. It was a service to be remembered. As I write on the evening of the day, I have still ringing in my ears the echoes of Mr. Hosmer’s beautiful hymn; it is inspiring to hear such congregational singing; Canon Marcon’s words, associated with the impressive delivery and accurate enunciation familiar to us, will not quickly pass; the long list of the Fallen awoke poignant memories of days already fading into the past; the beauty of the Lesson—"The Souls of the Righteous"—and the old-world dignity of the Bidding Prayer are not easily forgotten.

But, why, in a Commemoration Service which is partly one of Thanksgiving, did the Te Deum Laudamus find no place?

Also, would it not be advisable to make it clear that the statement that the Chapel was now “finished” referred only to the Memorial scheme? (Of course all agree that a Chapel is never “finished”; there are always additions and improvements for those that come after.)

This unqualified statement might conceivably button up the pockets of some intending donor, which would be an obviously undesirable result. All those to whom these things are a pleasure are looking forward to the completion of the dignity and beauty of what is the most important part of the Chapel—its Chancel and Sanctuary.—I am, Sir, yours, etc.,

—OCCASIONAL VISITOR.

The erroneous impression that the Chapel was considered “finished” has already been corrected.—Ed.)

To the Editor of “The Gresham.”

Dear Sir,—Though I fully realise the inadvisability of creating too many School colours, it has always seemed to me extremely illogical that, while there are colours for all games, and even for swimming and shooting, yet there are none for P.T. Not only does the School spend more time at P.T. during the year than at any other game, not only do the members of the special squad train up for the competition in a more definite manner than is the case for any other School event, but the P.T. competition in which we take part is, with the one exception of the shooting competition, the sole occasion where the School is able to try its strength against that of other schools. I would like to suggest, therefore, that this most important branch of the athletics of the School should be left no longer without the distinction which, to my mind, it most undoubtedly deserves.

To the Editor of "The Gresham."

Dear Sir,—I have been appointed to represent Gresham's School on the Public Schools Committee of the Manchester Rugby Football Club. My duties are "to help to keep the Club in touch with any players from my School living in this neighbourhood, with a view to their joining the Club, either at School at the present time or likely soon to be leaving."

Schoolboy Members do not pay any subscription.

I should be glad if you would publish this letter, so that anyone interested may write to me.—Yours faithfully,

F. GILBERT WOMERSLEY.
Hon. Secretary, O.G. Club.
